3. All judges are expected to mark in accordance with the competition rules provided. Mark sheets for all competitions will be given, in advance, to the judges. They will also receive (at least) a resume of each entry to be assessed.
4. Entries will be judged entirely on their merits, without regard to the value of the material on display. The judges will consider the exhibit against the Criteria for Evaluation of Exhibits, giving due regard to the competitors interpretation of the Guidelines for Preparation of Exhibits. All types of mounts are acceptable within our competitions and marks should NOT be deducted where black or other coloured mounts are used.
5. The judges shall have the right to refuse to judge an exhibit which in their opinion does not relate to the competition or class entered when referring to the Guidelines for Exhibits; they reserve the right to move an entry to a more appropriate class. The decision of the judges will be final.
6. In judging the winning society of the Millennium Shield, the award will go to the society achieving the highest aggregate number of marks in all three of the inter-society 9 sheet competitions. In the event of competing societies obtaining an equal number of marks, the winner will be determined by the society having the highest number of marks in the Traditional class. If there is still a tie then reference will be made to the number of marks obtained in the Postal History class.
7. In judging the 'Best Overall Competitive Exhibit' at the Convention, the judges having given due regard to the award gained in the class entered, may determine the winning entry by using whatever criteria they may decide amongst themselves.
8. Individual marking sheets, with comments, will be completed by the judges for each entry in every competition and class. These will be returned to the competition organiser as the judging of each class is concluded. The marking sheet for the best exhibit in each class may be used by the judges for their evaluation of the 'Best Overall Competitive Exhibit'.
9. As judging will have been completed prior to Philanglia, where we shall again be holding our Convention on Saturday 2nd July in St Ives, all entries will be displayed for the duration of this annual event.
